Nudes in Tartan

SYNOPSIS

Nudes in Tartan is a fun filled film about three young women and their useless boyfriends who are taking advantage of them.

It takes a while for the penny to drop with the girls that the guys are not on the level - Ross is a puppeteer with artistic pretensions and he has promised Katrina that his brother will publish her poetry. Hamilton a rip-off married art dealer who's having an affair with Lorna and is treating her badly. Meanwhile, Carmen who's a musician finds that Victor, a Russian looking for a wife, is just too manipulating for her freethinking tastes.

All of them end up living in the same flat with an easy mixture of free love and bickering. Their scams are unraveled when they can't raise the money for their rent. Hamilton has promised Lorna he will arrange an exhibition for her work. Victor has told Carmen he will get her onto the largest music venues in Russia.

None of this will pay the rent so the girls reclaim Lorna's paintings from Hamilton's gallery and sell them themselves. In the process they come to the conclusion that the boyfriends are parasites.

The upshot is that the girls throw over the useless lads and decide to make their own way in life instead of relying on men.

Screenwriter and Director

Written and directed by Robbie Moffat, who has made eighteen films in the last ten years. Known for different types of genre for film both historical and modern, Robbie is not afraid to tackle any subject from the mundane to the octane.

Nudes in Tartan has been abated from a Robbie Moffat's musical staged in Scotland in 1990. He has modernised his own script - updating it, giving it an edge for film. Nudes in Tartan is a funny ironic comic story about three women who learn the hard way that men can hold them back, not help them achieve success. The story has well-drawn characters who have a Bohemian lifestyle with no money but lots of pretensions.

Robbie's film-making has stood him in good stead – this year, he is an Nominee as Johnny Walker Great Scot 2011 for outstanding contribution to Scottish culture.

His first movie was 35mm shoestring budget Love The One You're With which was nominated for best Scottish Film 2000. Thereafter his output has been prolific with no-budget adventure films like the Winter Warrior, Bone Hunter and Axe Raiders, and contemporary features Hawk and the Dove, Finding Fortune, Rain Dogs, Cycle.

After making ten Scottish features in six years, Moffat moved his company to Pinewood Studios just outside London where he has made Dark Side of Heaven, Inside Out, Seven Crosses and Sisters Grimm. Moffat has a thriving career as a producer, director and screenwriter, most recently with Got To Run, Beast In The Basement and Nudes In Tartan
